Salvage Project

In November 2017, Innocap entered into an agreement with Solar Resources Inc. ("Solar"), a company in Singapore, to assist Solar to recover shipments of tin from sunken ships that are believed to be in the waters between Singapore, the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysia.

The salvage ship was in the waters near the Philippines searching the area where one of the sunken ships is believed to be when its Dynamic Positioning (DP) system, a computer-controlled system that automatically maintains a vessel's position and heading, began to malfunction. The vessel returned to harbor in Singapore for repairs. After a period of time, Solar was able to obtain use of a different ship which was equipped and left the harbor in Singapore in February 2019 to continue the search and salvage efforts.

No assurances can be given that the sunken ship will be found or that its contents will be consistent with reports describing such contents.

Paul Tidwell

Paul Tidwell, Innocap's Chief Executive Officer, has agreed to serve on the Board of Trustees of the EAST WEST MUSEUM, INC., a newly-formed museum located in New Jersey. He is also a Vice President who overlooks maritime projects and exhibits. This new position will not limit the amount of time that Mr. Tidwell will devote to Innocap.
